

Cantine Vitevis' Ca' Vellar Custoza DOC

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 20 Gennaio 2024

The Custoza wine area has always been defined as a “green oasis” on the outskirts of the city of Verona. Custoza was also a place where the epic Italian Wars of Independence took place, because, in addition to the fact that it has always been a land on the border, warring armies could be better coordinated from its hills.

Custoza is in the heart of the moraine hills, which are the result of the retreat of the glaciers and the consequent erosion of ancient mountains. Today, it offers wine tourists an overview of the Southern part of Lake Garda which is rich in woods, plateaus, lakes and springs.

This is Custoza wine's birthplace, and it is no coincidence that for many years this white wine has been part of the Veronese culture. In fact, in Verona it is one of the most consumed and appreciated wines.

This wine encompasses a blend of “Italic” white grapes where the fragrance of Garganega stands out, assembled with Trebbiani and Cortese grapes in order to obtain a wine of truly unique freshness and aroma.

Custoza, which has a color tending towards bright yellow, is vinified in steel. Thanks to this, it has a spring energy in its aromas. It also carries the harmony of ripe fruit in its taste accompanied by a well-balanced flavor.

Cantina di Castelnuovo winery – one of the four wine cooperatives that encompass Vitevis Group – is a great representative of this territory and Custoza has always been one of its most successful wines.

The Custoza “Cà Vegar” can be the perfect aperitif to be enjoyed in a typical tavern, but it can also be one of those “all-meal” wines, pairing very well with fish carpaccio or farmyard meats.
