

Colomba Bianca's Resilience Perricone

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 28 Novembre 2025

Colomba Bianca is a company that, with great foresight, has developed its strong identity over time based on organic cultivation across its 1,800 hectares, in that magical land of Sicily which the company itself admirably represents.

In this production area, the “ancient” Perricone is also cultivated, a grape variety that was part of Sicily’s history for many years, now rediscovered in a modern and very captivating key. It is a delicate but drought-resistant variety; with low yields in the vineyard, it has thick skin but a gentle character when used as a single varietal. In fact, in many cases, it is used to give structure and character to the more famous Nero d’Avola.

For Colomba Bianca, however, the Rèsillience Perricone is a true oenological pride. It is perceived on the nose as intense and very clean, recognizable by those notes of Mediterranean scrub, red fruit (particularly marasca cherry), and elegant spices of pepper and juniper.

In its beautiful packaging, Colomba Bianca brings Perricone to the market in a very contemporary version. On the palate, in fact, it is full and balanced; good tannic persistence completes its extreme elegance and its gustatory-olfactory harmony.

Its character makes this Colomba Bianca wine a true example of tenacity and modernity, a Perricone ideal for pairing with excellent rustic soups, pasta with sausage-based sauces, and with baked or grilled meats. It is also an excellent end to a meal with an aged Sicilian cheese, to savor all of its proud origin.
