

Cantina Tollo's Hedòs

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 17 Maggio 2025

It is always inspiring to write about solid and forward-looking realities like Cantina Tollo, a winery that proudly waves the flag of one of Italy's most historically renowned winegrowing regions and that fully embodies the human values of the Abruzzo land.

Led with remarkable vision and foresight by a team of skilled managers and passionate technicians who deeply love their work and territory, Cantina Tollo manages 2,500 hectares of vineyards with a commitment to quality viticulture. From these vineyards come product lines distributed across international markets, yet another testament to years of serious, attentive management guided by a customer-focused mindset.

Hedòs, the wine we are tasting today, is a white wine that champions the extraordinary potential of the native grapes from which it is made: Pecorino and Cococciola.

Hedòs, whose name evokes the golden color of early morning sunshine, offers pure sensory pleasure, starting from its bright, vibrant appearance. On the nose, this blend opens immediately with a broad and expressive bouquet of citrus and floral notes, followed by aromas of white-fleshed fruit and subtle exotic hints. On the palate, Hedòs harmoniously translates these olfactory sensations into a mineral-driven flavor, with just the right touch of salinity that enhances its drinkability.

Perfect from aperitifs with friends to dinners featuring fish or white meats, this wine is sure to impress even younger generations of wine lovers in search of authenticity and genuine pleasure.

Among Cantina Tollo's many expressions, Hedòs Bianco stands out for its ability to convey the identity of a land that never ceases to enchant. It offers visitors a true taste of the balance between history and charm, if they're willing to tune in and savor every breath of it.
