With the Limited Edition ROMA DOC Rosso, one of the most significant expressions of Poggio Le Volpi winery – bottle no. 6,247 -, we enter completely in Lazio region between native and international vines.

A full immersion to grasp new experiences, breaking out of the usual patterns to meet less praised but equally satisfying wines, less noble areas and an ancient viticulture such as that of the Alban Hills which in an aristocratic label celebrates a glorious past.

Intense and bright dark ruby □□red glass. Sip of universal, satisfying breath, capable of directing tastes and thoughts. Wide and enveloping nose of cherry and sweet spicy notes, a long memory of rose and geranium, an intertwined texture of density and softness offers longevity and consistency. A decisive version of a wine of roots, a link between origin and variety.

Winning pairing: Bucatini all'amatriciana

Company profile

In order to find the roots of Poggio Le Volpi Company we have to make a leap back of almost a century. Everything began in 1920, when Manlio Mergè starts his production of wine and oil. His passion for the land is first transmitted to his son Armando and then to his grandson Felice. Both transform the dream of grandfather Manlio into reality, founding in 1996 the Poggio le Volpi Farm in Monte Porzio Catone. This is a volcanic origin area, herefore its is inherently fertile. Poggio le Volpi represents the first business turning point of the family company.

If Armando started the Monte Porzio Catone production and the transformation of the company from local to a national one, Felice, following the business inclination of his father, becomes enologist leading the company into the circle of the most interesting winemaking companies in terms of production in the Lazio region, achieving high appreciation amongst the national and international niche wine lovers.

Felice Mergè cultivates a modern and varied winemaking tradition, typical of eclectic and ambitious people, just like Manlio and Armando Mergé.

Since 1920 the Mergè story is about territory, passion and quality.
