Masseria Altemura’s Zìnzula Bianco

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 19 Luglio 2023

The geological composition of this area of Puglia provides the exquisite vines of Masseria Altemura with the qualitative symphony found in this white wine, which is part of a range that also includes a rosé variant.

The mineral note is perfectly completed by the strength of the Altemura calcarenites, which are a vital component of the soil, and the mix used for the version tasted in white is another testimony of the farmers’ grasp of the soils’ particular qualities. It is a wine that exudes passion and dedication: the subtleties of its color are so vivid and dazzling that it leaves genuinely engulfing golden reflections in the glass.

A very alluring delicate minerality is revealed on the nose when the fresh note of the relatively early-harvested grapes is combined with a flowery breadth and fresh fruit.

The Fiano grapes, mixed with a little proportion of Moscato, produce tropical notes on the nose, which are subsequently confirmed on the tongue in a delicately harmonious manner.

The sip concludes with a lengthy and mineral aftertaste, revealing a full and extremely delicate acidity; clearly a white wine of absolute prestige.

The estate technicians deserve credit, especially Dr. Antonio Cavallo, who has been in charge of this oasis of quality’s production sector for many years with the remarkable insight of someone who fully comprehends it.

The pairings for Zìnzula Bianco are all directed at fresh and sunny raw materials, ranging from crab and mollusk salads to fish first courses; similarly, a glass for an aperitif is also a fantastic way to welcome guests.
