Stocco’s Ribolla Gialla

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 26 Maggio 2023

The union that binds the Stocco farm to its land is evident in the range of wines produced, always modern and of great qualitative value.

In this case, it is not only the love for a territory, for the vine or for the opportunity to give such great value to work, but above all a love for the land that we perceived by tasting the Ribolla Gialla produced with the Charmat method. .

In this splendid Italian region that bears the name of Friuli Venezia Giulia, the vineyards form a panorama that makes all that fascinating vision that, as far as the eye can see, impacts on the hills that are the preview of those Alps that together with the streams and their winds contribute to creating a truly unique microclimate.

Here, native vines have always been valued, and the Stocco company is one of those wineries that fully represent all the values □□of these vines, Italian wealth and regional pride.

One of these is precisely the Ribolla Gialla, with a perlage to the eye so fine and persistent that immersing itself in a bright yellow color brings to mind the best Italian sparkling wines made with this method. The nose is elegant, with floral notes typical of the grape, which are accompanied by shades of fresh fruit, in the mouth it maintains this elegance, never intrusive and its bubbles tickle the palate accompanied by a balanced acidity and great finesse and pleasantness.

A wine that we recommend with a fried paranza or a crouton with anchovies, thus being able to toast to Friuli and the skill of the Stocco company that has managed to achieve this beautiful combination of the vine and its harmonious and sparkling charm.

Company Profile

The name “Stocco” derives from the ancient Italian word for “sword”. The old family crest has long been a symbol of our identity and values: strength, firmness and respect for the land. Our work is guided by these values and is devoted to capturing the scents of our terroir, the “Grave”, so as to craft wines that give you the pleasure of uncovering the nuances, the unique character and the perfect elegance of the Stocco Friulan Wines.
