

Terre del Barolo's Alta Langa DOCG Metodo Classico Extra Brut

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 12 Dicembre 2023

For centuries, the allure of Piedmont's lands in the wine world has been widely acknowledged, especially concerning esteemed red wines like Barolos and Barbarescos, symbols of universally acclaimed prestige. It's within the Langhe, this Italian region, that a notably current classic method flourishes: the Alta Langa DOCG.

The Alta Langa Extra Brut 2019 we tasted today originates from the historic "Terre del Barolo" estate—a union of Piedmontese families established 65 years ago, striving for ever-increasing recognition in quality through a well-defined array of products.

This sparkling wine, predominantly crafted from 85% Pinot Nero and complemented by Chardonnay, boasts a mature, golden-hued yellow and presents an exceptionally fine, dense, and persistent effervescence, with an elegantly gradual development of remarkably white foam in the glass.

Aromas of Pan Brioche and ripe white fruit are pronounced on the nose, both intense and inviting. On the palate, it impresses with its immense freshness, crispness, and creaminess, concluding with a long, dry, mineral finish embodying harmonious elegance.

The 2019 Altalanga from Terre del Barolo is a striking sparkling wine due to its adaptability at the dining table: pairing seamlessly with raw seafood and tuna tartare, proving excellent alongside courtyard ragu pasta, and highly praised alongside baked vegetable lasagna. Its versatility extends effortlessly to main courses, elevating the ingredients' harmony.
