

Italian wines in the world: Col Vetoraz's Valdobbiadene Superiore di Cartizze DCG

scritto da Redazione Wine Meridian | 23 Giugno 2021

A new vintage and the usual great quality. Col Vetoraz is always able to surprise and its most famous label, Valdobbiadene Superiore di Cartizze, once again transfers knowledge and excellence. A territorial expression that needs no introduction given the winery's top-player role in Italy and around the world. A perfect vintage that enhances the virtues of the renowned Cartizze area at an altitude of 400 meters, the best grapes from the best vineyards beautifully exposed. An extraordinary territory to visit, which will not fail to leave you entranced in front of so much beauty.

With the Vetoraz Dry vintage 2020 it borders on perfection even higher in its pleasantness, concretely conforming to nature. The Martinotti Method also called Charmat, or the refermentation in large airtight containers, allows the wine to maintain the fragrance and floreality of the fruit. The characteristics of softness and charm of Glera, intertwined with flavor and freshness, combined with a moderate sugar residue, contribute to a complete drinkability.

Company Profile

Col Vetoraz is located in the heart of the Valdobbiadene DOP area, at almost 400 mt above sea level, on a hill that is part of the well-know Cartizze hills. It is right here that the Miotto family settled in 1838, developing the vine cultivation from the beginning. In 1993 Francesco Miotto, descendant of this family, together with the agronomist Paolo De Bortoli and the oenologist Loris Dall'Acqua founded the current Col Vetoraz, a small winery that was able to innovate and grow reaching in just 25 years the top of Valdobbiadene DOP production both in quantitative and qualitative terms, with over 2,300,000 kg of DOP grapes vinified per year from which is selected the production of 1,200,000 bottles. A great respect for tradition, deep love for the territory, extreme care of the vineyards and a scrupulous methodology of the production chain as well as the production of large cuvées, have allowed Col Vetoraz over the years to obtain excellent wines and flattering results at the most prestigious national and international wine competitions.
